Well....this is the official first 'Blog'...

it seems like this website has been in the making for such a long time. I remember when I first had the idea for it. It was when I started reading a Blog called "Where is Raed"

This blog changed my thoughts on many things. This guy is in Iraq...and he would write about everyday life there. If you really want to see some interesting reading...check out his archives prior to the war. The days leading up to it will blow your mind. To imagine people welding their homes so that the Army can't use the homes for bunkers. How the price of water has gone up 300-400 percent. It really makes you take a different perspective on things.

Well...the reason for the blog? Really...just to collect my thoughts. To be able to look a week back...a month back...a year back and see where my head was. I guess to share how I see the world and the people in. Maybe just to understand how life changes with just a soft breeze of the wind. Maybe it's sorta therapeutic. I don't know...and in some ways I do.

I'm going to make this website a community thing. A place for folks to come and chit chat about anything. The world seems so bogged down by what you should and shouldn't do...and ask. I find it so wild to see folks in their 30's who...because of one thing or another...are missing some basic pieces of life's building blocks. In our message boards...hopefully we'll all feel comfortable with asking the questions that are on our mind...and the rest of us will have the courage to answer them.

Well...off to work more on this website. Still have Archive pages to do and other things to edit. Have to work on Superman's, WonderWomans, Storms and Phoenix's Blogs....Then...Picture pages....

Hey...interested in having a Blog on this site...drop me a line and we'll hook it up. batman@thebatcavechronicles.com

Until next time...
